

Developing Effective Debrief (Dementia Services) Course

It is recognised that debriefing following an incident at both a staff and service level significantly benefits both professionals and the individuals that they support, repairing relationships and creating a reflective learning culture that supports the reduction of further incidents occurring. However, many services lack the structures, policies, and processes in place to achieve this through the implementation of a robust debrief model.

Dealing with an incidence of distress can be physically and emotionally stressful and can impact negatively on staff retention. Research suggests that staff can feel powerless, especially when attempts to alleviate a person's distress are not working, or where they are unable to make sense of a person's behaviour (MARQUE study). Professionals can feel overwhelmed, de-skilled, distressed, helpless or feel under supported. As a result of these feelings, all of which are perfectly normal, professionals may experience a decline in their ability to effectively provide support for those they work alongside and experience a decline in their own overall wellbeing.

This training programme provides opportunities for learning best practice, alongside tools and further resources to enable organisations to make meaningful change within their services.

Learning Objectives

- Identify how the 'debrief' process sits within a wider framework to reduce behaviours of concern/emotional distress.
- List documents in the workplace that inform the debrief process.
- State the barriers to effectively debrief following incidents in the workplace.
- Identify how the debrief process can support staff wellbeing and organisational learning.
- Describe the reflective process of analysing all elements of an incident using the ABC format.
- Describe a range of assessment tools that aid reflection including the DEVELOP tool.
- Describe how to evaluate the impact of positive support strategies.
- Outline an action plan for improving debriefs in the workplace.

The expected impacts of the programme include:

1. Seeking help where necessary to manage own stress and anxiety.
2. Using the Debrief tool to reflect on your own actions and feelings to develop awareness of their impact on others.
3. Putting in place systems to support staff with emotional wellbeing following incidents.
4. Utilising a range of workplace documents to support the debrief process.
5. Introducing new tools for gathering data to support debriefs.
6. Recording information objectively, and in a person-centred manner.
7. Leading one or both elements of a structured debrief.
8. Using inclusive methods to debrief the client.
9. Providing feedback to the management team on what worked well and what could have worked better.

How is this course delivered?

This course will be delivered live via the Zoom platform. Candidates will also be given access to a training system that contains the handouts and activities for the course.

Candidates will be sent the Zoom details for the live sessions and further information about their access to the training system one week ahead of the course start date.

The programme will be delivered over two 2-hour sessions, which will be delivered on different days. Between Session 1 and Session 2, there will be an activity for course participants to complete: a basic audit to be completed of the service that the participants work in, which identifies the strengths and weaknesses of the organisation in carrying out debriefs. The audit tool will provide the platform for developing an action plan for improvement.

The completion of the tool and subsequent action plan provides evidence for service improvement, and can specifically support evidencing CQC Key Lines of Enquiry including, but not limited to:

- Safe (How do staff seek to understand, prevent and manage behaviour that the service finds challenging? How are individuals supported when their behaviour challenges? How well does this align with best practice?)
- Effective (Are staff supported to keep their professional practice and knowledge updated in line with best practice?)
- Well Led (Does the service show honesty and transparency from all levels of staff and leadership following an incident?)
- Well Led (Are there services and support available to develop staff and teams to drive improvement)
- Well Led (How is information from incidents, investigations and compliments learned from and used to drive quality?)

Following the course, participants will receive further resources as part of our 'Impact Pathways', which will be split into four parts that will be sent out over a 4-month period. At the end of the four months, participants on the course must agree to participate in the training impact assessment.

What are impact assessments? Training is only effective if it has a real impact on practice. Our training programmes have identified expected impacts which we monitor and report on. Where there is reduced impact, we can adapt our programmes and work with you to improve the training outcomes.

Who should attend this course?

This course is suitable for individuals working in social care within dementia care, where individuals experience agitation and distress. It would particularly suit senior staff and/or managers who are responsible for overseeing the development of the debrief process.

As there is a mandatory practice-based activity required between the two training sessions that form this course (Sessions 1 and 2), anyone undertaking this course must be in practice in a relevant role, and in a position to undertake the linked practice-based work.

What additional resources will I access?

Individuals attending this course will also get access to the following tools developed by 3SpiritUK:

- DEVELOP Tool
- Group Supervision Tool
- The Learning Organisation
- Audit tool

What other standards does this course map to?
